Our endless quest for off-the-beaten-track items to place in this space was becoming increasingly futile over the week-end, when the sight of a poster heralding tonight's debate with Middlebury provided a suggestion: Why not look up some old Dailies of about twenty years ago and comb them for stories about debating? Maybe something unusual will turn up; or perhaps the attitude McGillsians of that day had toward debating will be of interest.

The suggestion was acted on. That is, in part at least. For we got sidetracked by one particular debating story which we think is intriguing. It appeared in the Daily of Tuesday, November 9, 1920—just twenty-one years ago.

Outstanding feature of the story in question and that which attracted the eye was the breathless headline:

MUST WEDLOCK BE FOR LIFE?

Science and Medicine Will Decide Tomorrow Night

There followed a comparatively routine first paragraph telling readers that the topic under debate was one "of universal interest" and that "in view of much public discussion at present" the subject would lend itself to lively debate. The resolution was given as: "Resolved that divorce is a menace to civilization and should be discontinued with every effort of Church and State."

The news item continued thus: "The affirmative will be upheld by three representatives from the Faculty of Science and a like number from Medicine will argue on the negative side of the question. As usual, when Medicine clashes with Science, the sparks will fly without a doubt. The subject offers many opportunities to display debating skill, and there will be startling and varied opinions offered for the solution of this national and universal problem."

"The debate should draw a large crowd of students interested in current problems involved in the present state of worldly unrest, and furthermore, those whose interests are not of such a serious nature" (the appeal to the mob) "will find ample amusement in what will most assuredly be a very lively debate."

The writer then goes on to say that, accommodation in the "Lounge" Room of the Union being limited, it will be impossible for the speakers to be supported by a "Thundering Thousand" but an appeal is made for at least "a noisy ninety" from each faculty.

The next paragraph opens with "Last week's debate on prohibition brought a big turnout..." The students are then urged to benefit from hearing "experienced speakers," and the shy are offered an opportunity of overcoming their shyness by participating in the open discussion scheduled to follow the debate. Participation in this discussion is characterized as "the privilege of every one who attends."

O tempora, O mores...

Deutsche Tisch

There will be a meeting of the German table on Wednesday at 1.00 p.m. in the Union Grillroom. All students interested in practicing their German language are invited to attend. Professors in German will be present to assist students.

Fifth CAMSI Conference Held at Laval University

Weekend Program Includes Clinical Demonstrations

The Fifth Annual Conference of The Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes ended last night at Laval University in Quebec City, with a public reunion in the "salle des promotions." It had begun on the morning of Friday, November 7th, in the "grand salon" of the University, with a welcome by the rector, Mgr. Camille Roy, and by the Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, Dr. Charles Vezina.

McGill was represented by its Medical delegation, as were all the other Medical schools of the country. Last year McGill acted as host to the CAMSI convention, Dr. J. C. Simpson, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, welcoming the delegates.

M. Jacques Dube, President of the National Executive, addressed the assembled delegates on Friday morning. A luncheon at 1:00 p.m. followed the speech.

Various addresses were made at a public meeting on Friday evening by prominent members of the medical profession connected with government health services.

A clinical session was held on Saturday morning at the Laval Hospital. It was prepared by the medical personnel of the Hospital, under the direction of Dr. Roland Desreulles. Discussions of problems (Continued on Page Four)

Numismatists Auction Collection of Old Coins

Further Sales Will Dispose of Remaining Stock

On Friday, November 7, the McGill Philatelic and Numismatic Society held an auction sale for the disposal of some of the old coins acquired in the Mile of Pennies Campaign through contributions from outsiders. One hundred and ten coins, constituting approximately one-fifth of the society's aggregate coin stock to be sold, were disposed of through the auction. Four dollars and thirty-six cents was realized from the sale.

No individual coin was sold for a higher price than twenty-five cents, although higher bids were made for one James II shilling. There is some doubt as to the authenticity of this coin, since it is dated 1690, two years after the death of James II. Sale of this coin will be postponed until an official investigation has been made and a decision has been made as to the discrepancy in dates. Sale of a George III half-crown dated 1818 was also delayed until such time as it can be officially valued.

The remaining four-fifths of the coin collection, including these two coins, will be sold at auctions to be held by the Society in the near future.

I.L.O. Conference Held in New York

The world conference of the International Labour Organization which was held at McMillan Academic Theatre in New York, closed yesterday after adopting seven resolutions for a more closely knit world economy after the war and more aid to the peoples of Britain, Russia and China in their fight for freedom.

The I.L.O., whose office was moved to the McGill campus from Geneva after the outbreak of war is carrying on its work here as an International organization.

The governing body of the I.L.O. met after the conference and appointed an emergency committee to meet on either side of the Atlantic between the annual conferences of the whole body.

Intercollegiate Debate To Be Held Tonight

Middlebury Vs. McGill At 8.00 p.m.

The first inter-collegiate debate takes place in the ball room of the McGill Union tonight at 8 p.m. The subject is "Resolved that strikes in war time should be effectively prohibited."

The visiting debaters from Middlebury College, Vermont, will uphold the affirmative side of the discussion, while the McGill team, composed of Jean Mitchell, an Arts Junior, and Mervyn Weiner, a third year student in Commerce, will defend the negative.

The Debating Union Society emphasized that the debate will be over in time to allow the audience to be safely hidden when the blackout starts.

Large Attendance Requested

Students should remember that the visitors are guests of the Students body and that the best way of showing hospitality is by attending the debate, stated the executive. A particular invitation is extended by the Debating Union to the freshmen. This class continued the executive made an excellent start at Thursday's Bovey Shield contest and tonight's debate will give them an opportunity of seeing another debating activity at McGill, and they can get an idea of what the future may hold in store for them. A further invitation is extended to the public, and every student attending should bring a friend along.

Musk-ox Now On Exhibition

Esquimaux Life Is Subject of Show in Museum

A mounted musk-ox is at present on display in the Redpath Library as the feature of an exhibition showing the history, range and value of this animal. The specimen is the gift of Mr. A. J. Alexander, of Montreal.

Also on exhibition is the 170-year-old diary of Samuel Hearne, printed under the title, "Journey to the Northern Ocean." The diary contains a detailed account of the life and habits of the musk-ox, which Hearne observed on his expedition down the Coppermine River.

The theme of the exhibition is the dependence of the Esquimaux on the musk-ox. This animal supplies the natives with meat and clothing, and they also utilize the bones and horns to provide themselves with hunting and domestic equipment. The exhibition is implemented by a display of objects concerned with the Esquimaux's daily life—snowshoes, sleds, knives, fire-drills, and a stone-sieve. These latter objects were lent by the McGill Ethnological Museum.

The exhibition, which will continue until the end of the month, has been planned particularly for students of history, zoology, anthropology and sociology.

Forge Sets Monday as Deadline for Contributions

This is the last week during which contributions will be accepted for this year's issue of The Forge, the literary magazine of McGill. The deadline is next Monday, November 17th. It is reported that there is still some demand for short stories of a conventional nature.

The main criticism of The Forge in past years has been that its scope is too narrow and its interest too limited. This year, however, a departure from the traditional vein of literary magazines is planned and non-technical articles on any branch of learning are requested.

Wreaths to Be Placed to Commemorate Armistice

The custom of placing wreaths in commemoration of Remembrance Day will be followed this year as it has been in other years. The wreaths will be placed at the foot of the World War Memorial tablet in the Arts Building on Tuesday morning. Two wreaths will be used in the ceremony, one from the C.O.T.C. and one from the freshman class.

The C.O.T.C. will attend the Remembrance Services to be held at the Cenotaph. As has already been announced lectures will be cancelled from 10.45 a.m. to 2.00 p.m. enabling students to attend the same.

R.C.A.F. Attend SCM Open House

Rev. MacMillan Speaks at Chapel Service

Th Rev. Hugh MacMillan, National Secretary of the Student Christian Movement of Canada spoke on "Commitment to Christ" at the Chapel Service which was held at Divinity Hall last night. L. B. Bewes, well known Montreal church and radio organist, now a member of the R.C.A.F. at McGill played at the service, which was conducted by John Karefs-Smart.

Following the chapel service, there was an open house held at Strathcona Hall. The program consisted of a sing song followed by play reading. The play chosen was "The Proposal" by Chekhov.

At an interview last night Rev. E. Lute, Secretary of the S.C.M. at McGill, made the following statement: "We are very glad to have so many of the Air Force men at the Chapel and Open House; these fortnightly meetings are designed especially for out of town students who have few contacts with city churches; we hope they will give the students at McGill and those of the R.C.A.F. a chance to meet and mix with one another." At the close of the program refreshments were served.

This afternoon at 4.30 the "World Mission of the Christian Church" group, which is organized by the S.C.M., held a tea at which the Rev. Hugh MacMillan spoke on the various missions of the world. There were 48 to 50 slides shown of missions in Japan, India, Africa and other countries.

I.V.C.F. Hears Rev. Nicholson

Hymn Sing Held at Student House by Fellowship

Rev. R. Nicholson, Pastor of St. Henry's Baptist Church, was the speaker at a hymn sing held in the I.V.C.F. Student House last night. This was the second meeting of the Fellowship this week-end; the first was a luncheon on Friday at which Dr. Stanford Reid addressed the members.

After the singing was concluded, Mr. Nicholson was introduced to the gathering by Stuart Rutledge. The speaker took for his text a passage from the sixth chapter of Ephesians. He stated that there are many people who consider Christianity a religion only for the weak but that such is not the case. In developing his point of view he spoke first of Christ Himself Who, though in some cases "meek and mild" exhibited great strength of character on such occasions as the driving out of the money lenders from the Temple and the Agony in the Garden.

Choosing examples of the strength of many Christians through the centuries, he spoke of the Apostle Paul, Martin Luther and, in more recent times, Elizabeth Fry.

Following the talk, Nelson Holland, President of the Fellowship, thanked Mr. Nicholson for his address, and made an announcement concerning the activities of the group in the near future. The next meeting will be a Fireside Saturday night of this week.

One Dollar From Every Student Is Amalgamated Charities Goal As Campaign Is Launched Today

Principal's Message

The present war confronts each one of us with a personal challenge. Canada must play its full part if we are to know the pride of accomplishment during the year that lie ahead of us, and Canada is simply a large group of individuals like you and me, each sharing the same traditions and ideals. If Canada is to make a greater effort, the responsibility rests upon the shoulders of each one of us. If we do not do all that we can, Canada will fail.

This campaign for the Amalgamated Charities may seem to bear little relationship to the war effort, yet it is a part of our individual responsibility. Our nation is at war in order that we may win the right to make a better world, a world in which human values are more clearly appreciated and the welfare of the individual enhanced. No sensible person would suggest that governments should, in this hour of crisis, turn their attention to the care of the maimed, the sick, the halt and the blind. No man with a spark of humanity in his soul would suggest that we should leave these people unprotected because the prosecution of the war demands our primary consideration.

Clearly, then, we as individuals must do our best to improve the lot of those who are underprivileged, thus playing our part towards the practical reconstruction of Canadian society.

Corporal Barber Returns from Great Britain

Former Employee Joined Up at Outset of War

Lawrence Barber, former employee of the purchasing department of the registrar's office, is the first McGill boy to return from overseas. Corporal Barber is now at the St. Annes Military Hospital, receiving treatment for a bad leg. He is waiting for a discharge from the Army.

Corporal Barber was attached to the Royal Canadian Artillery, and with his Artillery Holding Unit was all over Great Britain, although never on the continent. He had joined up at the very outset of the war along with a messenger boy on the staff of the purchasing department.

When some of Lawrence's unit went on the Spitzbergen expedition, they were fully prepared for battle and not for the cordial reception which was extended to them. The inhabitants welcomed them most warmly with gifts of chocolates and cigarettes.

Corporal Barber's comment on the Blitz is similar to the observations made by other reporters. He says that it is calm now, but that during the Battle of Britain from August to November last year, it was no less than terrific.

Coeds Will Act as Hostesses for R.C.A.F.

The Women's Union of McGill University are acting as sponsors for a dance for the McGill Contingent of the R.C.A.F. which will be held in R.V.C. on Saturday next.

The Upper Gym and Common Room will be used for the dance which will commence at 8.15. The music for the dance will be supplied by a nickelodeon and the coeds of R.V.C. will act as hostesses.

Lists will be posted in R.V.C. for girls to sign who wish to act as hostesses for the dance. Each girl will be given a box which she is to take home and fill with lunch for two.

Combined Drive Appeals for Aid

Proceeds Taken To Be Divided Proportionally

ONE DOLLAR, from every student of McGill University;—a total of approximately $2,000, this is the objective set by the Amalgamated Charities Campaign, as today is launched its annual appeal for aid to the needy and destitute of Montreal.

In his address to the canvassers on Friday, Colonel Rexford, Chairman of the Campaign, urged students to remember that despite the many more pressing demands for war relief and aid to refugees during war time, there are thousands of people here in the city who are just as much in need now as during peace.

This week's appeal, which combines the Federated, Catholic and Jewish Charities, will be the only one of the year, and the proceeds will be divided among the organizations in proportion to the number of students of each denomination enrolled in the university.

Although a committee of canvassers has been selected, consisting of one representative of each faculty, all students interested in furthering the drive are asked to see George Clarke, chairman of the student committee.

The individual quotas for each faculty have been announced as follows:

R.V.C.	$425
Arts	160
Science	350
Commerce	105
Engineering	360
Architecture	25
Medicine	310

Representatives from the faculties are as follows:

Dentistry	Albert Danforth
Law	George Clarke
M.S.P.E.	Norma Burgess
Graduates	James Ogilvie
Theology	John Denny
Arts	Tom Mulligan
Science	Vernon Fryer
Commerce	Richard Stevenson
Engineering	Norman Retallack
Medicine	Frank Leckie
R.V.C.	Sylvia Grove

The committee hopes that this year the objective will be reached as in the past the response from the students has not been great enough. It is stressed by the committee that this is the only charities drive which will be held on the campus this year.

Miss Harlow to Assist In Nutrition Campaign

Health Minister Mackenzie has announced that a national nutrition campaign will be undertaken by the Canadian government, with the aim of conserving the health of the people. Miss M. Harlow, instructor of nutrition at McGill, has been appointed to assist Dr. Pett, director of the campaign.

The chief features of the campaign will embody the advising of housewives with respect to family menu, as to advantageous purchasing, choice of foods and methods of preparation. Finally there will be a distribution of expert opinion on nutrition matters.

Vol. XXXI—No. 28

Blackout . . .

Tonight Montreal holds its second trial blackout. This one, however, will be of longer duration, forty-five minutes will elapse from the sounding of the "Alert" until the "All Clear" signal is given.

During the last blackout, most citizens and owners of large buildings alike did not attempt to fit their windows with black-out paper and other such materials necessary to prevent their lights from showing in the streets; they merely turned out the lights and stayed in darkness until the "All Clear" was sounded.

Was the last trial blackout really practical? What useful function did it perform when people made no preparations, but simply pressed the light switch? The object of a trial blackout is to prepare for the possibility of attack from the air. The idea that enemy bombers may yet raid us before we bring this war to a close is not so far-fetched. In such an eventuality we could not sit in the dark night after night, unable to carry on our necessary activities to any extent until the raiders shall have left. We would be forced to make the necessary arrangements so that we could illuminate our homes and buildings.

We are not preparing the slightest amount if we do not fit up our buildings as they should be for actual blackout conditions; we defeat the purpose of the blackout if we do not. If we put forth no effort in the way of preparation, the trial blackout is nothing more than a simple, impractical game.

R.V.C. '43

The class of '43 is to be congratulated on the success of its recent meeting. Of the 83 members in the class no less than five attended, which is assuredly a gigantic figure in view of the fact that most of them are so busy nowadays. It seems that they have no less than four hours of training in addition to their regular academic work. A total of approximately 24 hours a week and they are expected to attend such a trivial event as a class meeting.

Suppose they do not attend—what could be decided at such a meeting? Insignificant points such as how they might help the University war effort, or who might fill some of the major campus posts next year? It is far more important that Deborah look at those winter coats, or go to a movie. Moreover extra-curricular activities are already being managed by several capable girls, so why should they bother going to class meetings?

And these people are right. After all have women not gained equality with men at the University? They are entitled to vote, to hold almost any campus posts, and they have been admitted to the Chess Club, heretofore a strictly masculine organization. What then is the purpose of a meeting of the women at the University who next year will handle most of the extra-curricular activities?

Mussolini has declared a clothes ration system, whereby all odd clothing will go to a sort of governmental pool. Maybe Il Duce will start the ball rolling and get rid of his Axis ties.

Music Reviews

CONSERVATORIUM CONCERT

Sylvia Pat Kennedy, L.Mus., soprano, and Joseph Babary, L.Mus., violinist, both gave very creditable performances in their recital last Friday evening. The recital was given in the McGill Conservatorium, where both these musicians are studying.

Miss Kennedy's solos ranged from arias to the most lyric of lieder. It was in the latter that she was most at ease, although all her numbers were treated with discretion and care. Her voice, however, lacks volume, and she could hardly measure up to the requirements of the heavier of her songs. The tone of her voice is appealing, and well placed. Both her diction and her interpretation were excellent. Miss Kennedy's essentially lyric voice showed to best advantage in Wolf's "Das verlassene Magdlein" and Roger's "Virgin's Slumber Song," although all the lyrics were well done. Miss Kennedy was accompanied by William Stevens whose work was sympathetic and excellently done.

Joseph Babary played four numbers, and was very clearly most suited to those where the need of a skilful technique is paramount. His technical accomplishments were so pronounced as to make his interpretation and expression appear a trifle neglected.

Babary appeared to best advantage in Tartini's "Devil's Trill Sonata" and Paganini's "Two Caprices," in which he was able to demonstrate his technical skill. In Beethoven's "Romance No. 2" and Wieniawski's "Polonaise Brillant," however, his performance was not completely satisfactory because of his comparative lack of interpretive and expressive powers. Babary was accompanied by Eric McLean, who assisted very capably.—C. J. L.

"YOU BELONG TO ME"

AT THE CAPITOL

Columbia production, directed by Wesley Ruggles. Screenplay by Claude Binyon.

Characters: Helen Hunt.....Barbara Stanwyck
Peter Kirk.....Henry Fonda

Vendemer.....Roger Clark
Emma.....Ruth Donnelly
Moody.....Melville Cooper
Joseph.....Ralph Peters
Ella.....Maude Eburne

Barrows.....Paul Harvey

When a young multi-millionaire marries an attractive female physician who insists on continuing with her professional career—and whose clientele consists to quite an extent (and not incomprehensibly) of dashing young men, the situation is more than likely to lead to humorous complications. This is the basis of "You Belong to Me," currently playing at the Capitol.

Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda team in this film and both take full advantage of the material provided them to bring the film deft portrayals as they go from one difficulty to the other in their conjugal relations. Though Miss Stanwyck, at the outset of the picture, tells Mr. Fonda that a woman of her type can regard a line like his merely with the coldly clinical eye of a doctor, she succumbs a few minutes later and enters upon the dual life of matron and physician.

The picture, though chuck full of entertaining sequences, suffers slightly from lack of definition as far as the prevailing mood is concerned. Comedy, deftly handled comedy, has a disturbing tendency to merge into mawkish seriousness. There thus seems to be a struggle between the frothy and didactic phases of the plot to assert themselves. This, however, is not the fault of the players, but of the direction.

Besides the principals, Ruth Donnelly, as the doctor's receptionist, Fritz Feld, as a hotel clerk, and the players in charge of the other minor roles contribute fine support.

The picture is worth seeing for its novelty.

The second feature, SCARFACE LADY deals with the exploits of a female counterpart of Al Capone.—E. G.

"TARGET FOR TONIGHT"

AT THE PRINCESS

Crown Film Unit picture released in Canada and the United States by Warner Brothers. Produced with the full co-operation of the Royal Air Force and released with the approval of the British Ministry of Information. Unit manager, S. Spiro. Directed by Harry Watt. Screen play by Watt and B. Cooper. Photography by Jonah Jones. Music by the Royal Air Force Central Band.

Characters: Members of R.A.F. Members of R.A.F.
"Target for Tonight," currently shown at the Princess Theatre is by far the best documentary film to emerge from World War 2. Restrained almost to a point of casualness, unemotional and minus the expected flag-waving, this exceptionally impressive film could obviously never have been made in Hollywood.

The calm cool matter of fact manner in which the officers and men of the R.A.F. are shown going about their day by day routine duties, the utter lack of 'hamming,' and the grim reality of the situation as a whole, all contribute towards striking an emotional chord in the hearts of all who sit and tensely watch its forty-nine minutes' picture of a bombing raid over Germany.

We are shown the raid in all its details—from the tell tale packet of negatives parachuted down to English earth by a reconnaissance plane to the last homing bomber groaning down onto the flare-lit runway in the dirty dawn. The camera follows the raid preparations—the selection of the target by the Chief of Bomber Command in his great hall papered by maps, files of photographs, navigation instruments and telephones; designation of one experienced squadron to make a low-level attack; instructions to the chosen crews; checking, arming and gassing of the huge pot-bellied Wellingtons and then the take-off. The camera accompanies the crew of the ship 'F' for Freddie through the night, fog and clouds and then finally in a screaming dive down through enemy 'flak' and searchlights—down, down, down, to release its load of eggs on the designated railway sidings with oil tanks—and then the eventful journey homeward and final landing and general report to the anxiously awaiting Wing Commander.

Here we have a behind the scenes picture of a situation about which we have had very little detailed information—the actual work and planning that goes into an incident which we have come to take and accept very casually. "Target for Tonight" abruptly opens our eyes. Here too is a tribute paid to the unheeded heroes of the R.A.F.—the grease-monkeys, observers and wireless air-gunners.—M. M. M.

"SMILIN' THROUGH"

AT LOEWS

MGM release of Victor Saville production. Directed by Frank Borzage. Screenplay by Donald Ogden Stewart and John Balderston, based on play by Jane Cowl and Jane Murnin.

Characters: Kathleen-Mooneyan Clare

Rev. Owen Harding.....Ian Hunter
Ellen.....Frances Robinson

Kathleen (as child).....Jackie Horner

Dowager.....Frances Carson
Woman.....Ruth Rickaby

Jeanette MacDonald tries here to portray young love. It's a bit of a strain for her at thirty plus. However, Donald Ogden Stewart gives her some glorious pageantry—sunset in brown and gold, wedding in old Gothic church with bridesmaids in peach-coloured taffeta, singing 'A Long, Long Trail' in a flag-smothered hall to a bunch of homesick schoolboys in khaki. In fact, she sings all her songs with a great deal of effect, especially 'Land of Hope and Glory' to celebrate the entry of the States into the war in 1917.

Brian Aherne is dashing as a young lover, and forbidding as a beetle-browed destroyer of young romance, a half-century later. As you may gather from this, there are two generations involved, and how involved! Sir John Carteret is shown bearing one Jeremy Wayne a not-unmerited grudge for shooting his (Carteret's) prospective bride at the altar, fifty years previously. From here the action moves swiftly backwards through forgiveness of the son and war hysteria to the happy ending. Such crumbs of drama as there are, seem submerged in a sea of syrup.

Incidentally, mention should be made of one Jackie Horner, a seraph of perhaps six summers, who steals her one (to-adapt-or-not-to-adapt?) scene completely and has the most calculating mouth of any girl this reviewer has ever seen.

Accompanying, an excellent, if over-optimistic, March of Time on Norway's continued fight.—T. B.

MOTHERS OF AMERICA' TURN UNDEMOCRATIC . . .

Undemocratic, undignified, and disgusting are the only words that aptly describe the actions of a small group of women who pelted the British ambassador, Lord Halifax, with tomatoes and eggs during his recent visit to Detroit.

Moreover, this group of women have the gall to style themselves as "the Mothers of America." I am sure that the real mothers of this country are shocked by the actions of the demonstrators and by the audacity of this group claiming to represent them. Such actions certainly would not be condoned by the isolationist leaders of this country and it is surprising and alarming to find mothers engaged in such demonstrations.

Perhaps their cause of isolationism is just, but this type of protest is not only futile but very wrong. The ambassador is the guest of the American people and such treatment as he received is wholly discreditable to the nation.

It seems strange for "sons" to be protesting about the conduct of "mothers" but I believe that most of us are ashamed of their actions. This is not the first time this group of women has been heard of in an unfavorable light and it is becoming a public eyecore.

CIVIL RIGHTS

(From the Manitobaan.)

Our democratic state is at war. Its safety is endangered. The Canadian people through their Government are faced with the task of dealing with saboteurs and those who weaken our war effort. It is also faced with the task of preserving the inalienable rights of its citizens. To deal with saboteurs our Government has put the Defence of Canada Regulations into operation; to deal with civil rights it is relying on the good sense of the Canadian people, and the discretion of our police force and the Government itself.

That the Defence Regulations are an effective method of dealing with saboteurs no one will deny. That steps in this direction were necessary all of us in support of our war effort will agree. That these regulations provide the best apparatus for dealing with saboteurs, with a minimum of infringement upon our civil right, is another question.

Can the good sense of the Canadian people and the discretion of the Canadian Government be sufficient protection for our civil rights when in operation at the same time when the Defence of Canada Regulations? In looking at the Canadian scene we cannot say that the "protection" of the police and the Government has been discreet. Neither can we say with authority that it has been in-

AT THE PALACE

It seems rather incredible that after two years of war Montreal should regard the strife in terms of as racy and flippant a production as a YANK IN THE R.A.F., and to such an extent that this not unusual film should attract crowds for three weeks. It is very good from a technical point of view. Some of the action shots were filmed in Britain, and the evacuation of Dunkirk was well done.

It is the tale of a smart-alec American pilot, Tyrone Power, who joins the R.A.F. to please Betty Grable, and fights the Germans when he is not fighting with her. Both stars as well as supporting cast make the most of a rather weak plot.

On the same bill are several well chosen shorts, including an "Information Please" feature.

discreet. We have not seen the facts.

It seems that the Government has been reluctant to consult the good sense of the Canadian people. We believe that this has been an unnecessary and dangerous precaution of our Government.

Would toleration of our historic system of tribunals weaken our war effort? Has such been the case in Britain? We believe that the indulgence of our Government in these traditional British rights would increase enormously the public trust, confidence, and faith in our Government and in our war effort.

Our Government has been presumptuous. The English war measures act is in force for but one year. Its renewal each year offers opportunity for criticism of the statute and all enforcements under it during the year, and provides opportunity for the amendment of the act itself. Such an automatic opportunity does not exist in Canada.

There exists no effective organization, in Canada, for the consulting of the good sense of the Canadian people. Mr. Lapointe has said in Parliament that if he has to choose between individual hearsay and police evidence he will choose the latter. If the facts in cases were publicized this might still apply. But in the present setup this statement of Mr. Lapointe's might be evidence of a dangerous situation. Unless there exists an organization for consulting the Canadian people, we do not know that police and Government actions have been discreet. Such a situation could be a breeding ground for the worst kind of disregard for human rights.

As our newspapers are not full of accounts of bridges and power-plants being blown up, we can assume that our Government has been effective in dealing with sa-

Louis DeZwirek Again Honorary Boxing Mentor

Reappointment Announced by Dr. Lamb

Louis A. DeZwirek has been re-appointed as honorary coach of the McGill Boxing Club. The announcement was made by Dr. Lamb, director of the Department of Physical Education.

DeZwirek, a McGill grad of a few years back, was active as a boxer while a student here and since graduating has played a prominent part in Boxing Circles around Montreal in an official capacity. He is a member of the A.A.U. of C. Boxing Committee, Chairman of the YMHA Boxing Association and a prominent member of the Boxing Officials Committee for the city.

Louis DeZwirek will keep an eye on the Boxing Club at McGill, dropping in from time to time to assist the Chief Coach, Tommy Parr, but his main duties will consist of arranging and handling all of the details of outside competitions and exhibitions. In addition DeZwirek will be able to give valuable assistance in the organization and promotion of the pro-

Fencing Club Enjoys Large Turnout Friday

Twenty aspiring fencers were on hand last Friday in the B.W. and F. room at the gymnasium, when McGill's Fencing Club held its first class of the season. George Tully was in charge of the workout.

The sport appears to be gaining favour with the students. Many new faces were in evidence on Friday and most of these were being introduced to the sport. A few members of last year's squad were on hand, and the remainder are expected to show up this week.

Anyone who is interested in fencing or would like to become acquainted with its rudiments should try to attend practices as soon as possible. The instructors would like to keep the progress of the classes as uniform as possible.

Practices are held on Wednesdays and Fridays with all equipment furnished by the Athletics department. Masks, foils, and jackets are issued at the practices and held by the students during the season. This equipment is loaned, and the fencers are to return it at the close of the season.

Ice Teams To Practice

Sessions Held At Forum Starting Today

The intercompany hockey league began its activities last Wednesday, at a meeting of the managers in the Athletics Office. General plans for the coming season were discussed, in regard to continuing the league as it was last year.

Final arrangements can not be settled until regular company practices have been held, at which the staff can get an idea of the available material. On a basis of the turnout from each company, and the ability of the players, four to six teams will be organized. The distribution of the better players will have to be equalized in order to have a balanced league. As it now stands, last year's all-stars are lined up for the most part with E and B companies.

SECOND TEAMS

These latter will probably be appointed as playing coaches to the various companies. The first teams will be chosen from the general turnout of all interested from each company, and if there are enough players, a second league will be organized for the MacTavish Street rinks.

A second meeting of the managers is called for Friday, November 15th, at 5.15 p.m. — Winners 3 vs. E. E may play AF Tuesday, 5.15.

"C" Company Wins Soccer Championship

Atkinson, Chin Loy And Crawford Score Goals

By virtue of a 3 to 1 decision over "E" Company, a "C" Company team carried off the top honours of the Inter-Company Soccer League at Molson Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

In spite of playing one man short for the entire game, "C" Company showed too much power and team organization for their opponents to handle. The "E" Company team had won all their previous matches by default and they lacked the consistent team play that marked the attack of their rivals.

The first half of the game was scoreless, even though the C's had a wide advantage in the play, but McKellar, the E's goalie, turned in a brilliant performance in order to keep the enemy away from his domain.

SCORING BEGINS

During the second half of the game the true power of the "C" Company aggregation came to the fore. Led by the stellar playing of

Wrestlers to Engage Several Local Squads

The practices for the McGill wrestling club have already begun and are to be continued every Monday and Wednesday at 5.15 p.m. at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium.

Last Wednesday's workout saw the appearance of some of last year's squad and Frank Saxon, the coach, put on a short demonstration bout with Kirkpatrick. Saxon, having represented Canada at the Olympic Games, is an experienced and capable coach, and expects a good turnout of both newcomers and veterans at his classes.

The Wrestling Club is arranging for bouts with the Y.M.C.A. club and with several other of the local squads. An assault at arms will be held at the gym sometime before Christmas in order to give some of the novices a chance to gain some valuable experience.

It has been noticed by the officials that many of last year's squad are still at college and they would like to see Sabbath, Henry-Logan, Looker, Charters, Smart, King and Jones out at today's practice. The newcomers to the sport will be taught the tricks of the trade by Frank Saxon, who will be aided by some of these veterans.

Playoffs in Touch Rugby

Winner of Series to Play Engineers in Final

With the winter approaching, the Athletics Office has found it necessary to eliminate those companies that have not shown any interest in the Inter-Company Touch Rugby League. Those teams remaining are from A, D, E, F, and G Companies.

By virtue of their two victories over a team from the Air Force squad stationed at McGill, the "E" Company aggregation have already moved into the finals and have assured their company at least fifteen points. The remaining four teams must now hold a play-off for the right to meet the Engineering Company in the finals.

The remaining games to be played are between "A" and "D" Companies today at 5:15 and between the remaining two companies on Wednesday at the same time. The victors in these two matches will meet in the semi-finals on Friday, to determine which team shall play

The March of Sport

by allan

With the approach of winter, football is gradually being pushed out of the headlines. It will not be very long before Molson Stadium will feel the last bite of cleats, and will only call to mind the memory of a very unique season. Only twice was a major Canadian football game staged, while the rest of the time was divided among intercompany games, the odd exhibition game, high school games, and English rugger.

There was considerable considerable controversy over the unlimited interference rule, which was given a gala exhibition at the Stadium, in last Saturday's high school city championship. Although it has been universally adopted in the school leagues, and is the essence of the American game, our own Doug Kerr is reported to be strongly against it. Actually, it only serves to raise the average score of one game, improving it only from the spectator's point of view, but there have been many crowd-pleasing teams developed without it.

The Canadian game depends a great deal on interference as well, in getting the plays started; but once past the line of scrimmage, the ball-carrier is entirely on his own. With unlimited interference, larger gains are possible from the average line play. Therefore, passing plays have to be relied upon to open up the game. As the average passing attack loses momentum if used too frequently, Canadian coaches have had to work harder to replace open field interference. At McGill, Kerr has spent much time on the extension end run, which is still quite rare below the border, but which has become the most spectacular play in our own game.

The American teams do have the disadvantages to overcome, of the rule against movement by the backfielders until the ball is snapped. This places a limitation on the number of fake plays that can be executed, and on the space that can be covered laterally. But, although on fair-days, the Canadian game can produce much exciting play in its own way, in a crucial game or on a muddy day, when the quarterback has scruples against tossing the ball around recklessly, and his team is far from the goal line, he begins to feel that this disadvantage unknown to his game, would be more than overcome by unlimited interference. He would be able to hope for a long runback of a kick, or could feel sure that his backfielders could break through the line for more than the odd yard.

We well remember the days when a valiant Red team would spend the most part of the last quarter, in marching the length of the field by three and five-yard jumps. The attack bogged down before they could score a touchdown, and they had to be content with three points. And just before the end of the game, when they had to play safe, they could not move the ball out of danger by straight line play, a blocked kick deep in their own territory lost the game. Unlimited interference might have speeded up their previous march, or gained them more ground when the opposing defence became more compact in the shadow of its own posts, or given them a chance to move the ball out of their own territory in the final stages of the game.

HELP YOUR COUNTRY and PROTECT YOUR FUTURE through the new "VICTORY POLICY"

It is your duty to invest regularly in War Savings Certificates and other war loans to the utmost of your ability. Yet you need adequate insurance protection too! Since most people have only a limited amount of money for investment, how can these two essential needs be met? The new "Victory Policy" developed by The Mutual Life of Canada provides the answer.
Premiums are exceedingly low for a fixed period of years while you are investing in War Savings Certificates. And even at the end of this period, when the rate is adjusted, the premium is still lower than you would normally pay. Moreover, you will be able to use the proceeds of your War Savings Certificates as they mature to pay the premiums.
SPECIAL FEATURES
The "Victory Policy" has a number of attractive features which will be explained to you by the Company's representatives. It is a permanent plan that has been especially prepared to meet your immediate needs and to provide future protection as well. Students, and others with modest incomes, will find it particularly helpful.
Ask your nearest Mutual Life representative for complete details of this plan. Or write to The Mutual Life of Canada, Waterloo, Ont.

a while when Atkinson broke through and scored the lone tally for the E's. From then on the supremacy of "C" Company was never seriously in doubt. With Chin Loy and Crawford leading a persistent attack, and Gray and Bourne holding their opponents at bay, the C's onslaughts culminated with the scoring of two more goals by Crawford.
For the losers, McKellar, Haddeland, Cayci were quite effective, while Chin Loy, Crawford, Gray, and Wood were carrying the torch for the victors.
THE LINE-UPS WERE:
"C" Company—Goal: Seemungal; Backs, Gray and Bourne; Halves, Hoyte, Wood, and Craigwell; Forwards, Crawford, L. Smith, Chin Loy, and Brewerton.
"E" Company—Goal, McKellar; Backs, Hall and Pavlashek; Halves, Cross, Smith, and Haddeland; Forwards, Atkinson, Cayci, Garber, Cohen, and Weaver; Subs, Smith and Roche.

VAGABOND
I hooked the freight a mile from town
When it was going twenty,
In search of fortune and renown
In this rich land of plenty.
The northern lights were bright that night,
The stars shone clear above me,
When I began to fight life's fight
Away from those who love me.
I revelled in the hardships then;
I loved the song of steel—
The click each five-and-twenty feet
Of joint on bogey wheel.
And as the ties whizzed past, I thought,
"If you know better, show me."
The box-car floor above my head,
The rusty rods below me.
Thus, on a cold and wintry night,
When all the wires were humming,
I settled down to seven years
Of scientific burning.
I never did a lick of work
Till cold and hunger called me,
And then I started in to shirk,
As laziness enthralled me.
I travelled half the world, as freight
Or cattle-boat would bear me;
And ice was on the cat-walks then;
And death was often near me—
Until I longed once more for home.
The night was dark and murky;
Me, travelling through the dried-out belt—
At home, Thanksgiving turkey.
I hopped the flying southern freight,
And cold the north wind blew me.
And ice was on the cat-walks then;
A false step nearly threw me. . . .
I huddled down between the cars,
While cinders flew above me,
And searched in vain for friendly stars,
And thought of those who love me.
"At last," I thought, "goodbye to freights!"
And back to those who know me.
At home the fatted calf awaits,
And a feather bed below me.
Well, so I thought, and so I found.
The folks were wild with joy.
My relatives all gathered around
Their darling long-lost boy.
They petted me, and questioned me,
And mother wept full sore,
And tried to make me promise her
I'd never wander more.
With this in mind, I settled down
And took a steady job.
I'd money in my pocket now—
A dial in my fob.
I "rose in life"—with father's help,
And grew obese and bossy,
Till, once a sprightly rolling stone,
I daily grew more mossy.
One winter evening, coming home—
The snow was gently falling,
When walling through the snow and cold,
I heard the Flyer calling.
At first the sound sang distantly
And sadly through the gloaming,
Till once again there stirred in me
The urge, the Urge for Roaming.
I turned. All that was long ago—
An ancient irritation. . . .
She whistled, and the train went slow.
To pass the loading station.
My mother? She might soon be dead,
And me not there to mourn her?
I watched the box-cars one by one
Come gliding round the corner.
"What foolishness! I'm going home,
I've work to do tomorrow."
I turned, half crushed beneath the weight
Of bitter yearning sorrow.
And then the whistle shrieked again,
Just as she cleared the station.
I felt its call—a bitter pain—
I turned in desperation.
My muscles quivered as I stood

And listened to its keeping,
Which had, to my excited mind,
Infinites of meaning.
It thrilled of wild excitement,
Of the winter breezes biting,
Of thrill and speed and motion
And a life of constant fighting.
The rattle of the bogeys now
Affects me like a potion.
I jump—I've not forgotten how.
O, thrill and joy of motion!
The steel ahead is shining bright,
The bogeys click below me,
I cry exultant to the night:
"If you know better—show me!"
